FEDERAL AGENCY: ALCOHOL, DRUG ABUSE, AND MENTAL HEALTH ADMINISTRATION, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

AUTHORIZATION: Public Health Service Act, Title IV, Section 472; Public Law 93-348 as amended; 42 U.S.C. 2891-1.

OBJECTIVES: An individual National Research Service Award provides support to individuals for predoctoral and postdoctoral research training in specified mental health related areas; and an Institutional National Research Service Grant provides support and enables nonprofit institutions to develop research training opportunities for individuals interested in careers in a particular specified mental health related field. The Minority Access to Research Careers Programs (MARC) are intended to assist institutions with substantial minority enrollment in the training of greater numbers of scientists and teachers in fields related to mental health, alcoholism, and drug abuse.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE: Project Grants.

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS: Individual awards are made to fellows seeking predoctoral or postdoctoral support for full-time research training in biomedical/behavioral shortage areas. Beginning July 1, 1980 an institutional allowance of up to $4,000 for pre and $5,000 for post-doctoral support will be provided, upon request, to the sponsoring institution for each awardee. The allowance may not exceed $2,000 per fellow when the sponsoring organization is a Federal Institution. In addition, any domestic public or non profit institution may apply for an institutional research training award in a specified area of research from which a number of stipend awards will be made to individuals selected by the training program director at the institution. Support is available for both pre- and postdoctoral trainees. Beginning July 1, 1980, the policy of determining institutional expenses at 25% of the total grant award will be discontinued. The maximum amount for institutional expenses will be calculated at up to $5,000 per postdoctoral trainee. Indirect costs may be requested at 8% of total direct costs, exclusive of tuititon and related fees and expenditures for equipment, or actual indirect costs, whichever is less. Under NRS awards, individuals can be supported for up to a maximum of 5 years at the predoctoral level and up to 3 years at the post doctoral level. Research training support may not be used for intern or other clinical training. MARC Faculty Fellowships are for selected faculty members of institutions with substantial minority enrollment for advanced research training in specified areas of research related to mental health, alcoholism, and drug abuse. It is intended the fellowship recipients will return to their home institution to teach and conduct research, and to inspire and assist students to prepare for professional and research careers. The amount of the stipend awarded under the faculty fellowship will be commensurate with the salary or remuneration that the fellow would have been entitled to receive from his or her home institution, on the date of acceptance of the fellowship, except in no case shall the stipend exceed $25,000 annually. When an individual award is for approved training involving research at sites other than the sponsoring institution, an allowance may be requested to help support field costs of the research as well as travel. MARC Honors Undergraduate grants are to increase the number of well-prepared students from institutions with substantial minority enrollments who can compete successfully for entry into Ph.D. degree programs in disciplines related to mental health, alcoholism, and drug abuse; and to help develop and strengthen biobehavioral, psychological, social, and/or public health sciences curricula and research training opportunities in order to prepare students for research careers related to mental health, alcoholism, and drug abuse. PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: In 1979, processed 171,900 reference diagnostic specimens from throughout the Nation and the world. Approximately 1.8 million different determinations were made on these specimens. A significant step was taken in the past year toward reducing morbidity and mortality from the preventable complications of diabetes. While the disease was already known to affect approximately 10 million Americans and to cost over 300,000 lives and $6 billion annually, data was collected for the first time showing the actual rate of hospitalization, amputations, ketoacidosis and other severe complications of diabetes in 10 States. Research on the antigenic structure of the Legionnaire organism resulted in the isolation and purification of immunizing factors which have been used successfully in protecting animals with a lethal dose of the organism. Unique nutritional, biochemical, genetical, and immunological strains of gonorrhea have been isolated from patients in different parts of the world which may serve as potential models in epidemiological studies. Improved laboratory technology for the detection of botulism has increased the diagnostic accuracy from 33 percent to 87 percent. With a new maximum containment facility for working with highly pathogenic agents and with a highly trained and specialized staff, the CDC has become a world resource for needed diagnostic services and research on the world's most pathogenic agents, namely Lassa, Marburg, and Ebola viruses. More than 90,000 serological diagnostic tests were done on over 15,000 serum specimens from patients with suspected dengue. During 1979, 124 training courses on veneral disease control were conducted for 1,374 VD control workers. Continued to provide national leadership and technical assistance and consultation for planning and conducting influenza immunization programs directed toward the high-risk population. A serologic test was devised to diagnose Hepatitis A from a single blood specimen. Successfully transmitted viral hepatitis to chimpanzees for research purposes. Completed the Study on the Efficacy of Nosocomial Infection Control (SENIC) project. Ten States, under CDC direction, were able to define specific diabetic popluations at greatest risk of complications.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: By the end of fiscal year 1979, in the carcinogenesis bioassay area, tests of 251 chemicals were completed and published and testing of 79 addditional chemicals was begun. In the basic research area, molecular biologists successfully identified the genes and the protein products by which certain viruses of lower animals cause cancer. The techniques and knowledge gained from this research are being used to investigate the fundamental mechanisms by which mammalian cells, including those of humans, become malignant. Also, intensive research is being conducted on substances having the ability to prevent or reverse the malignant process. Among these are the retinoids (analogues of vitamin A), ascorbic acid, and natural and synthetic antioxidants. In the epidemiology area, studies have shown that there is a powerful synergistic effect between inhalation of asbestos and cigarette smoking in the induction of lung cancer. During the fiscal years 1980 and 1981, particular attention will be given to the ongoing validation of short-term in vitro tests for the carcinogenicity of environmental chemicals. Special attention will be given to investigating new substances that can inhibit or reverse malignant transformation. Efforts to understand the basic processes by which a normal cell becomes malignant will be continued, using the new techniques of molecular biology, including molecular cloning. In fiscal year 1979, 849 applications for "Cancer Cause and Prevention Research" were received and 334 awards (39 percent) were made.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: In fiscal year 1979 the continued accumulation of subject follow-up data in a cooperative study for the early diagnosis of lung cancer has demonstrated that regular sputum cytology exams along with x-rays can detect up to 25% more lung cancer than x-ray examination alone, and these cancers discovered by cytology are more likely to be resectable and potentially curable lesions. A large population screening study for bowel cancer utilizing the Hemoccult test is continuing to accumulate subjects, but no preliminary results are yet available. Work continues on a large number of tumor associated marker substances including hormones, isoenzymes, tumor glycoproteins, nucleic acid degradation products. New ways to look at and analyze multiple simultaneous marker values are being explored. The use of radiolabeled antibodies to several tumor associated antigens has proven feasible for the accurate localization of suspected tumor metastases by nuclear medicine scanning techniques. Work continues on the development of large screen x-ray image receptors which will transform the radiograph into a digitally stored high quality image. In fiscal year 1979, 141 competing applications for "Cancer Detection and Diagnosis Research" were received and 71 awards (50 percent) were made.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance: $10,000 to $3,063,635; $149,739.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: Clinical treatment research is aimed at using chemotherapy, radiotherapy, and immunotherapy alone and in combination in order to attain optimal treatment of the cancer patient. Major emphasis will continue to be placed on the clinical evaluation of newly identified therapeutic agents and comparison of these agents and their effects relative to older established drugs. Also, emphasis will be placed on the incorporation of active agents in combinations and in conjunction with other therapeutic approaches. These efforts have been undertaken through the use of both grants and contracts. The grants are primarily used for detailed studies by the Clinical Cooperative Groups. One phase of studies concentrates on detailed comparisons of new versus established therapies with single drugs, combinations of drugs and combined modalities. Another phase of studies concentrates on adjuvant trails in advanced cancer patients in which intensive chemotherapy is used shortly after primary local treatment, usually surgery, in an attempt to eradicate residual tumor. Additional emphasis will continue to be placed on attempts to identify treatments causing less morbidity for the patient and reduced functional loss and disfigurement through less extensive surgery. Clinical trails will be initiated with selected biological response modifiers, utilizing clinical resources established specifically for that purpose. Evaluation of known agents, such as interferon and thymosin, will be continued and expanded. In the area of fast neutron therapy, two clinically based facilities already awarded will soon initiate studies, while two others will continue to construct the necessary facilities and procure neutron generators for activation scheduled for the future. Controlled prospective clinical studies have been initiated with radiosensitizers and radioprotectors in selected generally unresponsive cancers such as those involving the esophagus and gliomas of the brain, plus studies in locally advanced cervical cancer to evaluate local heat as an adjunct to radiotherapy. Clinical treatment research efforts will continue on fundamental problems of surgical oncology, the use of x-ray and other radiotherapy techniques, and the interaction of these and other treatment modalities. Under preclinical treatment research, investigator-initiated research will continue to focus on fundamental preclinical problems in areas of biochemistry, pharmacology, molecular biology, chemistry and radiobiology. In particular, research will be conducted on biological response modifiers in order to understand their mechanisms of action. Radiation research will continue in the areas of neutrons, radiosensitizers and radioprotective agents, concentrating in particular on fundamental studies on how these agents interact with cells and with other treatments. With regard to nutrition, clinical studies established earlier to evaluate the role of intravenous hyperalimentation, in support of patients undergoing therapy, will be evaluable this year. In fiscal year 1979, 1,301 applications for "Cancer Treatment Research" were received and 392 awards (30 percent) were made.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance: Grants: $3,308 to $1,170,739; $89,356.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: In fiscal year 1979 significant progress has been made in studies of the cell membranes of cancer cells and normal cells in an effort to understand how changes in the membrane are related to abnormal cell growth. Small molecules that regulate cell growth have been isolated and purified and their binding to specific receptors on the cell surface has been studied. Using the new techniques of recombinant DNA and nucleic acid sequencing, the genes involved in malignant change are being characterized and we are beginning to learn how they are regulated. Of continued interest will be studies on the susceptibility of the mammary gland to neoplastic transformations during periods of pregnancy and aging. Studies will be expanded on the regulation of genes that control cell growth. Progress has also been made in understanding the complexities of the immune system and how it recognizes the abnormalities on the surface of tumor cells. These studies involve both the study of antibodies that circulate in the blood and "Killer cells" that are able to recognize and destroy cancer cells. Studies will be expanded on the functional capacity of "Killer cells" and their role in the immune reactions to lymphoid cancers. Continued effort will be directed towards learning how tumors influence the functions of the immune system so that cancer cells avoid destruction. In fiscal year 1979, 648 competing applications for "Cancer Biology Research" were received, and 278 awards (43 percent) were made.

Headquarters Office: Rosemary Wilson, Follow Through Division, Bureau of Elementary and Secondary Education, Office of Education, ROB No. 3, 7th and D Sts., S.W., Washington, DC 20202. Telephone: (202) 245-9846.

RELATED PROGRAMS: 10.550, Food Distribution; 13.428, Educationally Deprived Children-Local Educational Agencies; 13.429, Educationally Deprived Children-Migrants; 13.430, Educationally Deprived Children-State Administration; 13.431, Educationally Deprived Children in State Administered Institutions Serving Neglected or Delinquent Children; 13.512, Educationally Deprived Children-Special Incentive Grants; 13.528, Emergency School Aid Act-Bilingual Education Projects; 13.529, Emergency School Aid Act-Grants to nonprofit Organizations; 49.002, Community Action.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS: Grants for carrying out local Follow Through Projects: Each local project is like a miniature school system, although it might also be viewed as a part of a school system limited to certain schools and certain grade levels (K-3) within the large community school system. The communities are responsible for a total program of effort with the educational effort making up only one of the components. Aside from recognizing a variety of educational strategies, Follow Through recognizes the relationship between educational development and the physical, social and emotional well-being of the child by providing comprehensive services and special activities in the areas of physical and mental health, social services, nutrition and such other areas which supplement basic services already within the school system. Grants to Local Follow Through Projects for Expanded Demonstration Activities: Certain local Follow Through Projects have been awarded additional funds to create nationwide awareness of their successful educational practices. These demonstration centers or "Resource Centers" as they are called, have been validated for the effectiveness of their educational products and practices by the Joint Dissemination Review Panel (JDRP) in the Education Division of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Resource Centers represent exemplary projects where educational activities have been moved into a wider process of dissemination so that other local school districts can select, adopt, and adapt the validated innovations. Grants and Contracts for Technical Assistance-These grants are made, typically, to State educational agencies in order to provide leadership and technical support to local Follow Through projects within a given State. In addition, grantees are expected to disseminate knowldge of Follow Through to Non-Follow Through communities in order to have useful impact on educational practices in other parts of the State. Grant or Assistance Contracts for Demonstration (Sponsors): Sponsor grants are grants for the development of the approaches used in the local Follow Through projects. The approaches subscribe to a number of basic theories of learning and development and are embodied in different models, most of which are being tried out at several local sites. In most instances the models have been designed, and are being implemented and monitored, by sponsors, and their staff, usually based in universities or regional research laboratories. All sponsors serve the compensatory education objectives and accept the principle of parent and community involvement. Each carries out training of administrators, teachers, parents, and the community in implementing the processes of the educational model. However, the sponsors differ among themselves in the priorities which they assign to these objectives, in the sequence in which they pursue them, and in the diverse psychological theories of learning and personality development which serve as the foundations for the varying approaches.

Federally connected membership includes children residing on, or residing with a parent employed on Federal property, including any low-rent housing project assisted under United States Housing Act of 1937. The base year is the year immediately preceding the 4-year increase period for which application is filed. Total membership may be estimated for 2 years beyond the end of the 4-year increase period for determining unhoused children. The payment a district can receive is determined by multiplying the number of children counted for payment by the specified rate of payment per child. There is no matching requirement. Disaster assistance is based on the actual cost to reconstruct the same area as that destroyed by the disaster.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance: Office of Facilities Engineering of DHEW provides technical services to applicants and the Division of School Assistance in assuring that the applicant may construct the minimum school facilities authorized with Federal and, if necessary, additional local funds; that various assurances and other requirements are met; and in general monitors funded projects. After firm preliminary sketches and other requirements of the Act have been met, the project is approved and 10 percent of the total allotment is paid. When the basic contract has been let, an additional 50 percent is certified for payment and 30 percent additional is paid when the project is approximately 50 percent completed. The remaining 10 percent is paid after the project has been completed. Except for initial 10 percent payment, applicant must request additional payments when they are due.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance: Not more than $150,000 for the first year of a five year project; approximately $300,000 for each of the second and third years; $200,000 for the fourth year; and $150,000 for the fifth year.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: In fiscal year 1978 the Teacher Corps received 403 applications of which 274 awards were made to colleges, universities and local education agencies to develop and operate, in collaboration with local communities, programs of preservice and inservice training. Special emphasis was directed to multi-cultural training and training for individualized instruction for children with learning and behavioral problems in the regular classroom. In order to more effectively promote the permanent adoption of improvement brought about through Teacher Corps, a five-year project support strategy was inaugurated for new programs funded in fiscal year 1978. Projects emphasized participation of all grade levels (preschool, where available, through grade 12) through which a student would normally progress. Training was provided for approximately 18,000 interns and educational personnel serving in 139 project sites. These coalitions of university, school and community permitted on-site field based instruction to occur and provided for the field testing of new ideas and concepts in teacher education, particularly methods for teaching in low-income areas. As a result of this collaborative design for change, the program affected some 353,000 children throughout the nation's schools. In fiscal year 1981, 167 projects will provide training for some 20,000 educational personnel.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS: The following three projects reflect some of the primary emphases of the WEEA Program's 74 FY 1979 grants. 1.) Contributions of Black Women to America, 1776-1976: This project, at Benedict College in Columbia, South Carolina, is one of WEEA's largest and most significant. During the three-year grant, Benedict College is developing a series of curriculum materials on the significant contributions of Black women to the History of this country. Documents regarding Black women's involvement in politics, commerce and business, the arts, education, law, religion, social service--virtually every level of national life--will be included. The project will produce text and curricular materials which can be incorporated into existing curricula. 2) Conferences on Educational Equity for Minority Women: Three separate FY 1979 grants focus on educational needs of Hispanic women, Asian American women, and Native American women: A. The "Hispanic Feminist Scholarship Conference," to be held March 28-31, 1980 at San Jose State University, will bring together Hispanic women researchers, feminist activists, and community-based leaders to assess the current status of scholarship of Hispanic women and address pressing educational needs of Hispanic women. B. "Asian/Pacific Women of the Move; Strategies for Educational Equity" is the subject of a series of WEE-funded conferences; three regional conferences will be held in Hawaii, New York and California, culminating in a national conference in Washington, DC in August 1980. The conferences will develop strategies for working with the educational system to address major inequities which limit the educational aspirations and achievements of Asian/Pacific women and girls. C. A national conference of Native American women leaders was held, in September, 1979, to initiate the development of a "Comprehensive Resouce Directory of American Indian Women Leaders, Women Leaders,' which is being produced under a WEEA grant to National Women's Program Development in Texas. The Directory will be the first of its kind and will provide policy makers with a tool for identifying highly qualified American Indian women for apppointment to various advisory boards, and to positions in educational institutions and government agencies. Further, the project is creating a national network of Native American women who are advocates for educational equity for women at every level. 3) "Count Me In: Educating Women for Science and Math": This project, at Mills College in Oakland, California, is a skills development and career awareness program designed to encourage women and girls to enter scientific and technical fields. The project brings together womem of different ages, ethnic backgrounds, mathematical preparation, and career aspirations whose "math anxiety" mathematical preparation, and career aspirations whose "mat anixiety" and "math avoidance" have limited their career choices. The project already has had major success in breaking in traditional patterns of inadequate mathematics preparation for women, thereby expanding their educational and occupational fields.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS: The criteria are part of the regulations and will be published in detail in the FEDERAL REGISTER. They are available for the Womwen's Educational Equity Act Program. There are five general areas. Twenty-four points are awarded for "Need and Impact." The purpose of this criterion is to determine the extent to which the needs addressed by the project are significant to the achievement of educational equity for women. Sixteen points are awarded for "Objectives." This criterion determines whether the project's objectives are likely to meet the identified needs and whether the approach to achieving the objectives is a realistic one. Forty points are awarded for "Plan of Operation." The purpose of this criterion is to evaluate the effectiveness of the proposed strategy and activities designed to achieve the project's objectives, including the proposed management plan, budget, and evaluation plan. Ten points are awarded for "Applicant's commitment to educational equity for women," to evaluate the applicant's demonstrated commitment to educational equity for all women through review of various factors, including employment practices and programmatic activities. TYPES OF ASSISTANCE: Investigation of Complaints.

These benefits are provided through State agencies, school districts, nursing homes, skilled nursing facilities, medical laboratories, hospitals, colleges and universities, vocational centers, libraries, educational broadcasting facilities, day care centers, and social service agencies. Any person who believes that he or she has been discriminated against in the provision of these services because of race, color, national origin, handicap, or age, may file a complaint of grievance with the Office for Civil Rights, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Individuals may also file complaints of sex discrimination in education programs or activities receiving Federal financial assistance. Obligations: (Salaries and expenses) FY 79 $71,156,000; FY 80 est $65,092,000; and FY 81 est not available.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance: Not applicable.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS: During fiscal year 1979, 5,254 new complaints of discrimination were filed with OCR, and the Office investigated and closed 7,412 cases, including a large number carried over from previous years. This compares with 4,265 received and 3,814 closed in fiscal year 1978. OCR expects to receive about 5,855 complaints in fiscal year 1980, and a total of over 9,000 in fiscal years 1980 and 1981 combined. The vast majority of these complaints, about 7,900, will be resolved, leaving a carryover of approximately 1,100 complaints at the end of fiscal year 1981. Court Settlement: As a result of a settlement of three long-standing cases against the Department, OCR has largely eliminated its backlog of complaints. As a result, the Office can now apply its resources to carring out self-initiated compliance reviews. During fiscal year 1980, 527 reviews are scheduled. These compliance reviews address a variety of possible discriminatory practices under all of the statutory authorities. They are not necessarily related to individual complaints. OCR personnel working on self-initiated review and assistance activities are responsible for ensuring that persons are not unlawfully discriminated against in federally assisted programs. This purpose is achieved by conducting compliance reviews and monitoring the implementation of remedial plans. In fiscal year 1981 OCR will continue to pursue a multi-faceted strategy to achieve a balanced compliance program. The essential components of the program are complaint investigations, compliance reiews, and activities to encourage voluntary compliance. Because of the elimination of the complaint backlog and increases in investigator productivity, OCR will be able to devote more attention than ever before to review and assistance activities. Special Funds Cleared: A total of several million dollars in special funds was awarded during the 1979 fiscal year to public school districts brought into compliance with civil rights laws by OCR negotiations. The funds, issued under the Emergency School Aid Act, are for projects that will eliminate or reduce minority group isolation. The Emergency School Aid Act program is administered by the U.S. Office of Education, but the Office for Civil Rights acts as a screening agency for new applications. In reviewing applications, OCR found 92 applications initially ineligible for the funds. Fifty-seven applicants corrected the violations and were granted the money. Higher Education Desegregation: The Office for Civil Rights has negotiated acceptable agreements on plans to desegregate the State systems of higher education in Virginia, Arkansas, Florida, Oklahoma and Georgia. As a result of these plans, equal educational opportunity will be advanced for all citizens while allowing the States to maintain standards of academic excellence. OCR will monitor the corrective plans that have been negotiated with these institutions as they are implemented over a five-year period. Technical Assistance: Most technical assistance services are used to support compliance and monitoring activities. The projects include developing and disseminating compliance information, conducting workshops for grantees, designing model compliance plans for various types of covered programs, and training State and local officials who are responsible for achieving compliance. OCR will continue to assist recipients in complying with Section 504 and other civil rights laws. These activities are intended to provide recipients with the skills needed to apply the statute to particular circumstances. As a result, the technical assistance program promises significant long-term benefits by helping to prevent and eliminate discriminatory practices. Annual Operating Plan: For an analysis of Office for Civil Rights activities for fiscal year 1980, see Annual Operating Plan for Fiscal Year 1980, FEDERAL REGISTER, vol. 44 No. 250, Friday, December 28, 1979.

Under the AFDC program, payments are also made for care of specified children in foster homes or institutions. Federal funds up to $250 per home may be available for home repairs of a home owned by a recipient. Under the fully federally-funded repatriation program, money is provided for food, shelter, clothing, medical care (including hospitalization and treatment of mentally ill persons), and transportation to persons who have been returned to the United States because of destitution and who are not eligible for other financial assistance programs. Prior to making formal application to the NRS programs, individual NRS programs and individual NRS applicants must be nominated and sponsored by a Federal, public or nonprofit institution having staff and facilities appropriate to the proposed research training program.

Application Procedure: Institutions submit proposals for basic and clinical research. These are reviewed for scientific merit, for evaluation of applicant qualifications, for the adequacy of the research environment, and for the significance of the problem to be studied. Institutions submit career proposals for development of young scientists which are reviewed for an evaluation of the applicant's potential, and adequacy of the research training environment. A National Advisory Eye Council provides for final review. An application form, NIH-398, may be requested from the Division of Research Grants for research grant proposals and career proposals. Application forms and information concerning the NRS program are available from the Office of Research Manpower, Division of Research Grants, NIH, Bethesda, MD 20014, and should be submitted to the same address. National Eye Institute guidelines and supplemental instructions for preparing NRS applications are available from the Scientific Programs Branch, NEI, Bldg. 31, Rm. 6A-49, Bethesda, MD 20014. This program is subject to the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-110.

Award Procedure: Recommendations for approval are made by advisory groups for research, career and NRS applications. Final approval is made by the Director, NIH. Formal award notices are then transmitted to the concerned parties.

Deadlines: March 1, July 1 and November 1 for all new research grant applications. All other applications by February 1, June 1 and October 1.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time: Approximately 7 to 8 months for grant and career proposals, and NRS Institutional applications; and 6 months for NRS Individual applications.

Appeals: For grants, career and NRS applications, resubmission of revised proposals is necessary.

Renewals: For all project grants and NRS awards (individual and institutional), renewals are made by competitive application and review. Career awards are non-renewable.

ASSISTANCE CONSIDERATIONS:

Formula and Matching Requirements: Participation by grantees in total cost of project Grants is at least five percent.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance: Up to 5 years for research grants, developmental career awards, and NRS awards (institutional). Up to three years for NRS postdoctoral awards (individual). Awards to individuals made through an NRS (Institutional) may be made for 8 years (5 years as a predoctoral and an additional 3 years as a postdoctoral). Academic Investigator career awards up to three years. Assistance available for each budget period, usually one year. Payment usually made by Letter of Credit.

POST ASSISTANCE REQUIREMENTS:

Reports: The grantee is responsible for progress reports. These are needed for program and analysis as part of all continuation applications and upon termination of all awards. In addition, a final report is required. The final report includes an account of progress made toward achievement of the originally stated aims; a list of the results, positive and negative, which are considered significant by the investigator, and a list of publications resulting from the projects. Also a report of expenditures required 90 days after each budget period. Annual Reports of Expenditures of all institutional NRS awards. NRS awards (institutional) require that a statement of appointment for each trainee selected by the Program Director be submitted to the National Eye Institute for each year of training, not to exceed 3 years. Reports are required after termination of the NRS awards to ascertain compliance with the service and pay-back provisions for each institutionally selected trainee. Reports are required after termination of the individual NRS awards to ascertain compliance with service and payback provisions.

Audits: Grants, career awards, and NRS awards are subject to inspection by representatives of DHEW and NIH.

Records: The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has recently initiated a record retention requirement of three years after termination of grants, career awards, and NRS awards. Records must also be maintained for each budget period.
